Enroll Now in Psy 2800: Psychology of Love
Spring 2010

What is “love?” Is it good for our health? Do men and women have different ways of loving? What’s the best way to handle long-distance relationships, or to argue with your spouse? What are the key predictors of relationship success? The Psychology of Love will answer these questions. This course provides an overview of current research on the basic structure, function, and dynamics of love and relationships. No previous background in psychology is necessary — the course is appropriate for all majors and levels.

Previous students rave:
“By far the greatest class offered at the U, whether you’re a psych major or not.”
“The information is so useful to your everyday life -- it brought up relationship issues I had never thought of.”
“Dr. Diamond’s passion and sense of humor made the hours pass so quickly. There was never a dull moment.”

Day & Time: Tuesday, 3:30p - 6:00p
Location: BEH S AUD

Doesn't fit your schedule? No problem! For the first time, we're offering a companion online version PSY 2800-090, CLS#16599. You'll log on and watch videotapes of each lecture right on your computer screen, at your own convenience. All your coursework will be submitted electronically. It's almost as good as being there in person!

Instructor: Dr. Lisa M. Diamond is a nationally-recognized expert in love, relationships, and gender who has been featured in the New York Times, The Oprah Winfrey Show, Oprah Magazine, Scientific American, Salon, The Advocate, and Women's Health. Her dynamic teaching has been recognized with the University of Utah's Early Career Teaching Award and the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences Superior Teaching Award.

Department of Psychology
University of Utah
380 S. 1530 E., RM. 502
Salt Lake City, Utah 84112
Phone: 801-581-6124

Department of Psychology
University of Utah
380 S. 1530 E., Rm. 502
Salt Lake City, Utah 84112
Phone: 801-581-6124