The Psychology Department welcomes:

Professor Judith Smetana

Disagreements, disclosure, and secrecy in adolescent-parent relationships

Friday, October 30, 2015
10:30 am-12:00 pm, BehS 712

Dr. Smetana is Professor of Psychology in the Department of Clinical and Social Sciences in Psychology at the University of Rochester, where she heads the Social Development and Family Processes Research Group.

Dr. Smetana’s research interests include adolescent-parent relationships and adolescent development in different cultural contexts; the development of young children’s moral and social knowledge; and parents’ parenting beliefs and their relationships to parenting practices and child outcomes.