The College of Social & Behavioral Science has awarded the 2013-2014 Herbert W. Gustafson Graduate Fellowship to Jennifer Taber and Nick Perry. This award is given to graduate students pursuing a quantitative study of human social behavior. Congratulations Jen and Nick!

Jennifer Taber

Jen will be using quantitative methods in service of understanding ambivalent attitudes in health domains (e.g., eating behavior), with an eye to reducing ambivalence as a way to promote healthy behavior.

Nick Perry

Nick will be obtaining additional quantitative training to facilitate analysis of complex dyad-based data in the context of HIV risk behavior.
